W. A. KINNEY AT AALA PARK

could not justify themselves to the people, or in asking a continuance in power, by saying that these bills had been defeated, or the promises broken by individuals of the party. The party must stand or fall by what it does or does not do. It must be held responsible, especially in legislative matters, for the bills it passes or the bills it does not pass when it had the power to, irrespective of the fact that some of its members may not have been guilty of the party wrong.

The only way by which responsibility could be fixed on a party was by holding it responsible for what it should have done and did not do, or what it should not have done and did do.

"The only way for the people to express itself as to a course of action or a policy," said Kinney, "is to vote out the party which has failed them and vote in the party that they believe will accomplish what they want done. Therefore, the thing to do, if the Republican party has not kept its promises nor carried out what you want carried out, is to vote for the entire ticket of the Democratic party."

"A man who stays with a party that has broken its promises, even if he has tried to carry out the party promises, must be judged by the party record. A man has abundant justification for leaving a party when it breaks its promises and refuses to carry out its platform pledges. L. L. McCandless had abundant justification for leaving the Republican party, because it opposed him in its land law measures and broke its promises and refused to stand by what it was pledged to."

Mr. Kinney said that he himself had drafted a measure designed to aid in the settlement of the land and had taken it to the Republicans in the Legislature. It had been passed in two House but it had been killed by the Republicans in the Senate.

L. L. McCandless.

L. L. McCandless said that the Democrats had conducted a clean campaign along issues that were important. The Republicans on the other hand had carried on a campaign of misrepresentation. Delegate Kuhio was repeating the assertion that in the country districts McCandless had made speeches of a different tenor than those he made in the towns. This was as much as saying that Kuhio believed that the people of the country districts were not as intelligent as those in the towns. This was as much as saying that the people of the country districts were not as intelligent as those in the towns. For his part, McCandless said, he believed the people in the country were intelligent, and that they knew what they wanted. The Democratic party had circulated twenty thousand copies of the American Homestead Act throughout the Territory. This showed the conditions on which 160 acres could be secured by American citizens from the public lands there. But he had specifically told them that he did not believe that 160 acres of cane land, or of rice land, or of any individual, on the other side of this island seventy people had applied for public land and had asked for about nineteen acres apiece. This showed what sentiment was in regard to this matter.

McCandless said that Kuhio in some of his speeches had said that the maps of the islands which McCandless had displayed in his public speeches showing the public lands of the Territory, showed a little grass land but nothing that amounted to anything. McCandless said that there were a good many hundred acres of the public lands that were at this very moment in cane cultivation. There were thousands of acres more that were good agricultural land, and there were other thousands of acres that were suitable for grazing.

"If anything were needed," said McCandless, "to prove that the Republicans are against doing anything to get the land into the hands of the people, it is shown in the fact that sugar plantation agencies have refused to contribute anything to the campaign expenses of the Democratic party giving as a reason Link McCandless' speeches and the party platform on the land question. This shows they didn't want anything done that would interfere with their control."

Treasurer Trent.

R. H. Trent said: "My worthy opponent on the Republican ticket, in addition to charging me with being a malingerer, is pleasing himself greatly and amusing his audiences by telling them in eloquent Hawaiian that I am a bird. I could but laugh when the reporter came to me that he had borrowed the Rev. Decha's story and applied it to me. One of my friends, that sugar plantation agency has refused to contribute anything to the campaign expenses of the Democratic party giving as a reason Link McCandless' speeches and the party platform on the land question. This shows they didn't want anything done that would interfere with their control."

"But tonight I want to make a report, and I believe that will interest you more than mere joking or the handing out of empty promises. I have now been Treasurer of the County of Oahu for a little more than three years, and in that time have handled the sum of $1,839,450.37 of the people's money. These are large figures and hard to understand. Let's see if we can not reduce them to every-day terms. Well, in round numbers, we have handled $48,000 every month, or $12,000 every week, or $2000 every day, or $300 every hour, or $5 every minute."

"The County Act provides that at least once every three months, and as much oftener as they may choose, the chairman of the Board of Supervisors, the County Auditor and the County Attorney shall count the cash in the Treasurer's office and see if it is all there. In the first eighteen months of my service, Mr. George W. Smith, Mr. James Bicknell and Mr. E. A. Douthitt were the gentlemen whose duty it was

WYNNE TOUCHED REED AND SAID--

James Reed, second officer of the Rosecrans at the time Engineer McKinnon was killed, occupied the witness stand the whole day in the trial of John Wynne yesterday before Judge Dole and a jury.

Reed was called from the dock below by the statement of someone that there was something the matter with McKinnon in his room. He described how he started down to McKinnon's room and as he was going down the companion way he met Wynne coming up. Wynne touched him on the shoulder and told him something.

On objection from Wynne's attorney, Frank Thompson, Reed was not permitted to tell what Wynne said, until after the corpus delicti had been proved, that is that a crime had been committed. Consequently Wynne was taken in his examination by Deputy District Attorney Rawlins down the companion way to McKinnon's room. What he saw there he described to the jury, the injuries he found McKinnon suffering from, his removal to the hospital and his death.

Then Rawlins took the witness back to the meeting with Wynne on the companion way, where Wynne touched him on the shoulder and told him something. But at that point in the examination the court adjourned for the day, so that what Wynne said will not be known by the jury until today.

Verdict for $7200.

In the suit of Mary K. Kaleikini against Albert Waterhouse, administrator of the estate of Kahui, deceased, which has been on trial for some days before Judge De Bolt and a jury, the jury yesterday returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $7200. The administrator's decedent was trustee and foster-father of the plaintiff. The suit was for an accounting of her estate which had been in his hands.

BACILLI OF LEPROSY STILL IN HIS SYSTEM

Hope is again deferred.

The Nastine treatment, from which so much was expected, and which it was believed had cured a patient at the Kalia Receiving Station who has been under this treatment for several months, has been found not to have effected a cure after all.

A bacteriological examination was made lately by Dr. Walter Hoffmann and Dr. J. T. McDonald, and the bacilli of leprosy was found to be still in his system.

That the treatment is not without effect, however, is proved by the fact that all clinical symptoms have disappeared, and the bacilli themselves, instead of being distributed as they are in leprosy cases, are gathered in bunches. This, it is said, is one of the typical characteristics resulting from the Nastine treatment.

As a result of this examination the patient will have to remain segregated and the Nastine treatment will be continued.

to check me up. During the past eighteen months this duty has devolved upon Mr. Charles Hustace, Jr., Mr. Bicknell and Mr. John W. Cathcart. You will note that none of these gentlemen belong to the same political party that I do, and I am pleased now to say that they performed their duties conscientiously and well.

"I feel sure it will interest you to know how they found things from time to time. Please bear in mind that their visits were made at no stated times, and that no notice was sent ahead of their coming. Here are their reports, signed and sworn to in every case before a notary public. And in every case they found the money in the Treasurer's office correct to a cent."

"Now, gentlemen, if there is any credit due for the manner in which this money has been handled, I want the Treasurer's clerk, Manly Hopkins, to have his full share of it. Practically every dollar of it has passed through his hands, and not even a single mistake has been charged up to him."

"And this is the record on which I ask for your votes for reelection. The Home Rulers and Republicans are both anxious to get control of the treasury. A vote for them will be a vote to repudiate the record that has already been made and to substitute other methods. Do you want to make the change?"

In introducing Frank R. Harvey, Chairman, said he was a representative Hawaiian, who, as an official, had won for himself honor and credit. Harvey paid his respects to the paid runners which the Republicans were employing in such numbers, notwithstanding at the beginning of the campaign they had announced with much flourish that they would not employ any.

Chairman Ingham, in introducing William Jarrett, candidate for Sheriff, said, jokingly, that in serving warrants he had never failed but once, and that was when he had been given a warrant for a Republican who was going to vote the straight Republican ticket. He had been obliged to return that, "not found in Oahu County."

Jarrett said he was a poor speaker, but that when it came to action he believed he could say he was there with the goods.

Other speakers were H. T. Moore, E. M. Watson and Joseph J. Fern. In opening the meeting Chairman Ingham said, among other things:

"If Mr. McCandless were going about making the rash statements, as charged by the Republicans, I, for one, would petition to have a guardian appointed for him forthwith."

"But even if it were true that the promise of a homestead of 160 acres of the public domain had been held out to voters, of what significance would such an offer be as compared with the actual transfer by the Republicans of 48,000 acres of the public domain to one individual?"

She says she saw her brother in San Francisco about that time, after which he left for Honolulu.

The Filipinos who called on Secretary Mott-Smith some time ago looking for work, and stating that they had been led to come here through misrepresentation, left yesterday on the Maui for Hutchinson plantation, where they will go to work at $18 a month. Mott-Smith sent a wireless message to Manager Wolters Thursday afternoon, asking if he would give them employment, and an answer was received in just twenty-two minutes, saying that he would. This is considered a record for sending a wireless.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition for which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a broken-down system. No matter what may be its cause (for they are almost countless), its symptoms are much the same: the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigour.

It is a condition for which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a broken-down system. No matter what may be its cause (for they are almost countless), its symptoms are much the same: the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. ## CAMPAIGN CRAFTERS AFTER THEIR HARVEST

The campaign grafter is getting in his fine work with a vengeance. On every hand is heard the plaint of the stricken candidate. As the days go by the importunities of the grafter increase in frequency and virility, and the result is that already not a few candidates who are suffering their political novitiate are heartily sorry that they were honored at the convention.

It is impossible to accurately number the campaign grafters but there must be two or three hundred operating in this fair city at present. Up to the time of the conventions the majority of them were earning a frugal but honest living on the wharves. As soon, however, as the nominations were made, they quit
